

Certain gases, including (CO₂) and (CH₄), are transparent to most of the of light arriving from the sun but are relatively opaque to or heat ; thus, energy passes through the Earth's atmosphere on arrival, is converted to heat by absorption at the surface and in the , and is not easily re- into space.

atmosphere, carbon dioxide, infrared, methane, radiated, radiation, wavelengths