Later that night I was trying to do some studying when Mum came up to my room. As I heard her footsteps on the landing outside my door, I shooed Merlin under the bed.

'May I come in?' Mum called, popping her head round the door.

'Why not – it's an open house,' I answered, looking behind my Brontë, which I was studying for my English exams.

My Mum sat on the chair by the dressing table, elegant as ever in an oatmeal wool suit and burgundy shoes. 'I have to go on a short training course next week, Ronnie,' she said and went on to explain that she would be away from the house for at least four days. 'I hope you don't mind being here with Granny on your own?' she asked.

I didn't look up from my book, although my eyes weren't taking in any of the words. 'Do I have a choice?' I asked.

There was silence, then I heard Mum shift her weight in the chair. 'Well, you should say if you have any objections.'

'And if I have?' I asked still not looking at her.

Again there was a pause. 'Say so,' Mum said. I didn't answer. I felt too choked up. She was doing it again. Putting her own life before the family. I heard her get up and walk to the door. She waited a second or two before leaving, then softly closed the door behind her. I waited until I heard her footsteps on the stairs, going down, then I closed my book with such a bang that Merlin ran to the far corner of the room and sat staring at me with wide, fearful eyes. For a moment I stared at him staring at me. And then I walked over and pulled my Adidas bag from the top of my cupboard and began to push some of my clothes into it.

Later, after everyone had gone to bed, I crept into the bathroom and added my toothbrush and towel to the bag. Merlin darted through the shadows beside me as I made my way down the stairs, and then let myself out into the dark, deserted street.

What are you doing? I kept asking myself as I walked along the empty streets. But I didn't really know what I was doing. Only that I had to do it. To walk away from everything …

Running away isn't going to be the answer, I told myself. But the truth was, I just couldn't stay at home any more.

16. In the story, Merlin is

A) Ronnie's pet.
B) Ronnie's younger brother.
C) a character from Ronnie's book.
D) None of the above.

17. The girl's mother

A) was going away on a holiday.
B) was going to be away for less than a week.
C) was leaving her daughter home alone.
D) was doing something she had never done before.

18. The girl kept looking at her book while her mother talked because

A) she didn't want her mother to see Merlin under the bed.
B) she was absorbed in her reading for the exam.
C) she wanted to avoid looking at her mother in the eyes.
D) she disliked the way her mother was dressed.

19. The girl left the house

A) without taking any personal belongings.
B) while her family were still up and about.
C) after washing her teeth.

A) didn't want to sit for her English exam.

The well-dressed, gray-haired woman was crying her eyes out. She had just been fined $100 by the judge because a month ago her dog made a mess on the front lawn of the courthouse.

"I just got out of the cab and I tied Poopsie to the lamp post. After I paid the fare and gave the driver a dollar tip, I turned around and saw that Poopsie had made a mess. I didn't have any plastic bags, so I said, 'Well, Poopsie, let's go home. There's nothing I can do about this now.'

"We were just starting home when I heard this voice out of nowhere: 'Excuse me, ma'am. Is that your dog?' I turned around. It was an officer of the law. Well, of course, it was my dog. 'That dog just made an illegal deposit on the courthouse lawn. As its owner, it's your responsibility to dispose of that deposit. See the sign over there? I'm going to have to write you a citation.'

"I asked him what sign he was talking about. He pointed all the way down to the end of the block. One little sign, a block away! How could anyone see that? I couldn't see that sign with my best opera glasses. The officer said that I could fight the ticket. He said the judge was a nice old man who owned four dogs. So I said, 'OK, thank you, I'll fight the ticket.'

"So when I went to court, I dressed Poopsie up in his prettiest ribbons and made extra sure he did his business first. We were both so excited. I just knew the judge and Poopsie would like each other.

"But do you know what happened when we got inside? They had a different judge, a judge who is allergic to dogs, and he immediately started sniffling, coughing, sneezing, and looking around. And then he yelled at me to get the dog out of the courtroom. He fined me another $100 on the way out without even giving me a chance to talk about Poopsie's chronic diarrhoea. It was terrible! I'm still upset."

21. The phrase "her dog made a mess" in the first paragraph means that the lady's dog

A) dug a hole on the lawn.
B) tore up some papers.
C) made a poo on the lawn.
D) made a pee on the lawn.

22. The lady did not dispose of the mess because she

A) hadn't seen the sign at the end of the block.
B) didn't have her opera glasses on her.
C) was in a hurry to get back home.
D) had nothing handy to pick it up with.

23. An officer of law stopped the lady and

A) fined her $100, paid in cash.
B) quoted a sign.
C) wrote her a fine ticket.
D) wanted to arrest her.

24. The lady decided to fight the ticket because

A) the officer said she had the right to do so.
B) the sign was too small and illegible.
C) Poopsie had chronic diarrhoea.
D) she was just an old and poor woman.

25. Which of the following is TRUE about the judge in the courtroom?

A) he had four dogs.
B) he behaved rudely.
C) he had a cold.
D) he was in a bad mood.

Dear Lucy,

I've been very busy the last two or three months, so please forgive me for not answering your email sooner. I had to prepare for my final college exams. Now they are over and I'm waiting to see the results. I worked very hard. I even gave up my tennis. The weather didn't help me at all, either. We had weeks and weeks of warm, dry weather, and it was hard having to stay indoors at a desk covered with books. When I say the weather was warm, I mean warm for England, of course. It hasn't been as hot as in my country or yours.

Now that the exams are over, I've been trying to catch up with my mail and writing lots of emails. However, I'm not devoting all my time to correspondence. I've done some short trips round England with some college friends of mine.

You told me you'd like to visit Portugal in the summer for a holiday, and asked me what places you should visit. I'm really glad to hear that you're likely to spent a few weeks in my country, and I wish I could be at home to welcome you and take you around. But I'm spending the summer here: I want to see Scotland before I go back home and start teaching.

It's actually a pity you have to visit Portugal in the summer, but now you're a teacher too and you have to take your holidays in July and August. Spring is the best season – there are wonderful wild flowers everywhere and the temperatures aren't as high.

Still, I hope you enjoy your holiday. Do write and tell me all about it when you get back.

I'm looking forward to hearing from you soon again.

Love,

Monica
