This list would be incomplete without this book. A collection of forty stories from this brilliant mind will send you on a little rejuvenation trip every time you pick this book up. The most attractive feature of her writing is how the stories explore the reality of human life with the right doses of grief and humor.

Each story is a masterpiece on its own and has to be enjoyed to the fullest. A must-have in your collection if you are a bibliophile.

On paper, racism is not tolerated by the law, but is that the reality? In this book, Eduardo portrays how multiples races affect different strata in America. He gives us a deep insight into the system based on research from social studies and historical connections. His work also includes the relationship between racism and economics.

Racism is a global issue, and to eradicate this heinous practice, reading more about the reality of the system helps comprehend where we are going wrong—a must-read for those interested in global issues.

The frontman of the Airborne Toxic Event has his share of pain and memories from childhood, which are intriguingly portrayed through his memoirs. Recording rock memories wasn't a real thing back. The melancholic childhood experience will bring tears to your eyes, and your mind is going to wander back to the book, making it impossible not to read this great piece of work.

THE LIFE OF PI: BOOKS REVIEW

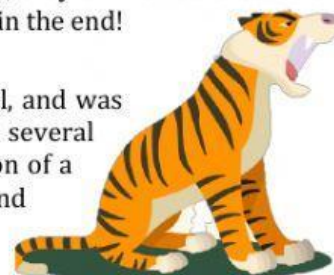

The plot

The book starts with Pi's childhood in Pondicherry, India. His father owns the city zoo and the family lives in the zoo. Pi is very interested in religion. His family is Hindu, but he is curious about Christianity and Islam too and decides to believe in all three religions.

When Pi is 16, his parents decide to close the zoo and move to Canada. The family travels by ship to Canada taking the animals with them. On the way, there is a terrible storm and the ship sinks. Sadly, Pi's family and the sailors all die in the storm, but Pi lives and finds himself in a lifeboat with a hyena, a zebra, an orangutan and an enormous tiger. One by one, the animals in the lifeboat kill and eat each other, till only Pi and the tiger are left alive. Pi and the tiger spend 227 days in the lifeboat. They live through terrible storms and the burning heat of the Pacific sun. Pi finds comfort in his three religions, but sometimes he feels sad and lonely. Finally, they arrive at the coast of Mexico, but you will have to read the book to find out what happens in the end!

Interesting Facts
