Four hours of free time

How do young people really spend their free time? Watching TV? Riding a bike? Doing extra homework? In a recent survey, we asked 1,000 young people to tell us exactly what they do when they have four hours of free time.

Taking it easy

Most of the people we interviewed – over 90% – used the word 'relaxing' in their answers. Around a quarter of the interviewees play computer games, and over half relax by reading books, magazines or comics. Watching TV and using the Internet were very popular choices. Nearly three quarters of interviewees chose TV, and over 80% chose the Internet, as their favourite ways to spend free time.

Other ways of spending free time

Over 95% of the interviewees chose more than one activity, and some of their other choices are very interesting. Nearly 10% selected gardening as one of their top activities, and 19% – nearly a fifth – chose sewing! Baking is also a very popular activity. Around a third of the young people we interviewed chose making cakes as a great way to spend free time. We're not sure how much time they spend eating them, but we don't think that will take too long!
