A This is Max. He talked with his father about the future of the environment. Read their conversation and circle the correct answer.

Max: Are you reading my magazine, Dad?
Dad: No, I'm not. I'm reading a car magazine. There's an interesting article about electric cars.
Max: Electric cars? Are they for children?
Dad: No, they're for adults. Scientists hope that more people will drive electric cars in the future.
Max: Why?
Dad: Because they're better for the environment. At the moment, cars use gasoline, and there are two big problems with that. Firstly, we make gasoline from oil, and oil is a fossil fuel. Experts are worried that in the future we'll use up all the fossil fuels on Earth.
Max: What will happen then?
Dad: We'll have to adapt to a different way of life. We'll have to use different forms of energy.
Max: What's the other problem with gasoline cars?
Dad: They pollute the air. In some big cities cyclists wear masks over their nose and mouth because the air is so dirty. Air pollution also makes the Earth's temperature go up.
Max: And if the Earth gets hotter, the polar ice will melt.
Dad: And if that happens, some animals will lose their homes, and they'll become extinct.
Max: Do you think you'll buy an electric car, Dad?
Dad: I might get one. The problem is they're very expensive to buy. At the moment, they're more expensive than gasoline cars. If they're cheaper in the future, I'll definitely buy one.
