Read the story. The verbs (1-12) are all in the past progressive. Change them to the simple past if necessary.

The most exciting experience I ever had was at Disney World in Florida. I was on vacation with my family, and we (1) were celebrating my parents' 25th wedding anniversary. It was a typical Florida day – the sky was blue, the sun (2) was shining, and everybody (3) was having a great time.

As I watched the roller coaster, I thought to myself, "Those people must be crazy." Just then, my brother (4) was coming up to me. He (5) was holding two passes. "I'm going on the roller coaster," he said, "and you're coming, too." I've never done anything dangerous or exciting in my life. So I don't know why I (6) was agreeing to go on the roller coaster, but five minutes later

I (7) was holding onto my seat, 35 meters in the air, sure that I was about to die. The ride (8) was seeming to go on forever. But finally it (9) was stopping, and we got off. My head was spinning, but I felt really happy. Maybe I was just glad to be alive! Later, we looked at the pictures from the day. The roller coaster pictures were hilarious. Everybody (10) was laughing and waving their arms in the air. That is, everybody except me! I was holding on, and (11) was screaming. I've never been so terrified in my life, but I'm glad I (12) was doing it.
