Selva is at home and he's talking to his father. His father is a police officer.

'How was your trip to the museum, Selva?' asks his father.

'Oh, it was great! We saw a mummy. His name was Prince Nebi.'

'Prince Nebi? Oh, yes! We are looking for Prince Nebi's ring,' says Selva's dad.

'I know. It's gold and it's got a big red stone,' says Selva.

The man sees Selva's father and the children running. He puts his arms up. 'Look, Dad! He's wearing Prince Nebi's ring!' says Selva. 'You're right. Let's get it back,' says Selva's father.

The next day is 31 August. It's Independence Day. The children are going to the parade with Selva's father. Nora is dressed up as a soldier, and Selva is dressed up as a police officer. The children see a man's hat. 'Let's give it back to him,' says Nora.

'Nora and Selva, you are heroes. Your picture is in the newspaper,' say their classmates. 'Good job, children,' says Miss Anita. Nora and Selva are very happy. 'Hurray!' cheer the children.
