DR JEKYLL AND MR HYDE by Robert Louis Stevenson

Dr Henry Jekyll, a respectable London doctor, believes that people have two sides: an evil side and a good side. He decides some experiments to separate these. He develops a drug and tests it on himself. In this way he hopes more about human nature. When he takes the drug he becomes Mr Hyde, an evil criminal. At first he enjoys the freedom to be another person. He doesn't expect destroyed by the drug. Soon he can't stop becoming Hyde. He hides in his house to avoid anyone he knows. He can't stand the evil Mr Hyde. His evil side has won.
