

Present Perfect Simple and Continuous

Use

G4

1. We use the Present Perfect Simple:

- for an action which happened in the past but we don't mention when exactly.
I have seen this film.
- for an action which happened in the past but its results are obvious in the present.
Peter has broken his leg. He can't walk.
- for an action which started in the past and continues up to the present.
I have taught at this school since 2005.
- for an action which was completed a short time ago. In this case we usually use just.
I have just finished my homework.
- to talk about experiences that we have or haven't had in our life. In this case we use ever and never.
I have never been to London.
Have you ever met anyone famous?

2. We use the Present Perfect Continuous

- to emphasize the duration of the action, with FOR and SINCE.

We have been living here for 10 years.
They have been learning the guitar since May.

recently

Place: between have / has and the Past Participle or at the end of the sentence.
Sentences: affirmative, negative and interrogative.

He has recently bought a computer.

lately

Place: at the end of the sentence.
Sentences: affirmative, negative and interrogative.

I haven't seen John lately.

Have been (to) / Have gone (to)

Have been (to) and have gone (to) are used as the Present Perfect of the verb go.

- We use have been (to) to say that someone went somewhere but has come back.
Alex has been to Paris. He came back last night.
- We use have gone (to) to say that someone went somewhere and is still there.
Sandra has gone to the market. She hasn't come back yet.

already

Use: It means that something happened before it was expected.

Sentences: affirmative.

Place: between have / has and the Past Participle.
I have already had lunch.

yet

Use: We use it to talk about whether something that was expected has happened or not.

Sentences: negative and interrogative.

Place: at the end of the sentence.
Have you seen him yet?
I haven't had breakfast yet.

ever

Use: We use it to ask if something has happened at any time up to the present.

Sentences: interrogative.

Place: between have / has + subject and the Past Participle.
Have you ever ridden a motorbike?

never

Use: We use it to say that something hasn't happened at any time up to the present.

Sentences: affirmative (it gives a negative meaning).

Place: between have / has and the Past Participle.
I have never travelled by boat.

just

Use: We use it to talk about something that happened a very short time ago.

Sentences: affirmative.

Place: between have / has and the Past Participle.
The ball has just broken the window.

since

Use: It refers to the time when the action started.

Sentences: affirmative and negative.

They have lived in London since 2002.

for

Use: It refers to the duration of the action.

Sentences: affirmative and negative.

I have worked in a hospital for five years.

today / this morning / this month / this year...

Use: We use these expressions when the period of time hasn't finished at the time of speaking.

She has written four letters this morning. (It is still morning)

How long...?

We use How long...? with the Present Perfect to ask about the period or the length of time from the present moment back to the beginning of the action. We can answer using for or since.

How long have you known her?

I have known her since June.
