I love the smell of fresh coffee. It really _____ me _____. It reminds me of the time when I lived in a flat over a café. I always woke up to the smell of coffee. It used to fill the flat in the morning. The café had only just opened when I moved in and it was really popular. I only lived there for six months, and ever since I've always associated the smell of coffee with the clatter of cups and the chatter of voices.

I grew up in the Czech Republic. I'll never forget the first time I saw the sea. I was nineteen. I had never seen the sea before. I had just started working for a family, _____ their three kids. They had planned a holiday in Spain and they took me with them. Seeing the sea for the first time was incredible! It was such an amazing sight. So big, so open. I just stood there and looked at the sea, trying to _____ it all _____. And once I actually got in the water, they just couldn't _____ me _____. I loved the waves, the sound they made on the sand. We could hear them from our hotel room. The kids slept so well, they were so tired. It made my job really easy as they were lulled to sleep by the waves.

I love this photo. We took it on holiday last year in Buenos Aires. It _____ great memories of our trip. This was one of the highlights, we'd just been to visit the antique market in San Telmo – it's great. It's held once a week on Sunday, it's a great place to just to _____ the atmosphere – anyway, we were just sitting down for a coffee, when this couple started dancing in the square in front of us. It was amazing, they were so good. I've seen the tango so many times in dance halls and theatres, but nothing beats seeing it live in the streets of downtown BA. Whenever I look at this photo, the scene just comes flooding back and I can hear the music playing in my mind.
