Review: the gTar by Incident

If you've ever picked up a guitar for the first time and tried to play a song, you know how frustrating it can be. Well, the gTar changes that ... completely!

When I first heard about the gTar, I was sceptical. Could it really make guitar playing as simple as the company claimed? Once I'd tried it, though, I was blown away. This isn't a cheap, plastic toy; it's made of solid wood and feels like a genuine electric guitar. Pop in your iPhone, activate the app, choose your song and start playing. It's that easy!

Priced at $399, it's an affordable instrument for hobbyists, amateurs and anyone who wants to grasp the essentials of guitar playing.

2. What is the writer's opinion of the product?
- a. He hadn't expected it to be so good.
  - b. He found it rather frustrating.
  - c. It made him feel like an amateur.
  - d. It doesn't match the maker's claims.

3. Which statement about gTar is NOT true?
- a. You pay nothing for the necessary app.
  - b. It can be used with any kind of smartphone.
  - c. You can play it for a few hours without recharging it
  - d. It can help you to play a regular guitar.
4. What is the purpose of section C?
- a. To sell more extras with the product.
  - b. To ask people's opinion of the product.
  - c. To promote the product to customers.
  - d. To provide information many people need.

5. What does Joe suggest in his email?
- Jimmy should order the gTar from the website.
  - He will buy a present for Bob himself.
  - A group of them can share the cost.
  - Bob has seen the gTar and wants it.
