

Word Work says...

When you're writing, there are two very important words you use: and and but.

Use and to connect two similar ideas. Look:

I like musicals. I like horror films.

I like musicals and horror films.

Use but to contrast two ideas. Look:

I can ride a bike. I can't ride a horse.

I can ride a bike, but I can't ride a horse.

Use a comma before but.

Now, you practice!

I like English. I like Maths.

I like English _____ Maths.

I like reading. I don't like riding a horse.

I like reading, _____ I don't like riding a horse.
