Part 2. Reading (30 pts)

Passage 1: You came across this story on a sports website. Read it and answer the questions which follow.

Never Too Old to Chase Your Dreams

"Find a way" is the slogan Diana Nyad said she had this year. And that's exactly what she did. Nyad became the first person to swim from Cuba to Florida, 103 miles, without a protective cage, willing her way to a Key West beach just before 2 p.m. – nearly 53 hours after jumping into the ocean in Havana for her fifth try in 35 years. Shortly after conquering the Straits of Florida, the 64-year-old endurance swimmer sat down with CNN Chief Medical Correspondent Dr. Sanjay Gupta. "It's all authentic. It's a great story. You have a dream 35 years ago – doesn't come to fruition, but you move on with life. But it's somewhere back there. Then you turn 60, and your mom just dies, and you're looking for something. And the dream comes waking out of your imagination," Nyad said. The swim wasn't easy. "With all the experience I have, especially in this ocean, I never knew I would suffer the way I did," she said. "For 49 hours the wind just blew steadily, and it was rough." At one point, she was vomiting because she had so much salt water in her system and was shivering. She sang lullabies to help her relax. "It was really rough that first day, Saturday, after the start and I just said: Get your hands in somehow, and with your left hand, say, push Cuba back, and push Florida towards you," Nyad said. Through it all, she held her mantra close: "You don't like it. It's not doing well. Find a way."

Nyad set out from Havana at 8:59 a.m. Saturday with a crew of 35, including divers to watch for sharks. In her first attempt to cross the Straits of Florida in 1978, rough seas left her battered, delirious and less than halfway toward her goal. She tried again twice in 2011, but her efforts ended after an 11-hour asthma attack and jellyfish stings.

Last year, she abandoned an attempt about halfway through after severe jellyfish stings and a lightning storm put her in danger. Nyad was a swimming sensation before these attempts. In the 1970s, she won multiple swimming marathons and was one of the first women to swim around the island of Manhattan. She was 8 years old when she first dreamed about swimming across the Straits of Florida.

Dozens of onlookers – some in kayaks and boats, many others wading in the water or standing on shore – gathered to cheer Nyad on as she finished the more than 100-mile swim. She pumped her fist as she walked onto the beach toward an awaiting medic before being guided to an ambulance. "I got three messages," an exhausted and happy Nyad told reporters. Her face was sunburned and swollen. "One is never, ever give up. Two is you never are too old to chase your dreams. Three is it looks like a solitary sport, but it's a team," she said. The swim was a long-awaited triumph for Nyad.

Nyad, who was 29 when she first tried the swim, said last week that she wanted to show that “you can dream at any age.” “This time, I am 64. So, the years of my life are shorter to the end,” she said.

She made it but it wasn’t easy going. About 7:30 a.m., she was slurring her speech because of a swollen tongue and lips, her support team reported on its website. As the team called her around dawn for her first feeding since midnight, she took longer than normal to reach the support boat, the report said. Divers swam ahead of her, collecting jellyfish and moving them out of her path. It was tough going but she found a way.

- D. Shopping with Friends
- E. The Importance of Appearance
- F. Different Approaches
- G. A Regular Need

Shopping

- 0 Shopping is a shared passion of many people, irrespective of age and culture. Whether on street markets or in chic stores, shopping seems to offer something special. Indeed, walking down almost any European high street at the weekend, it is clear that, for some, a tour of the shops is a weekly treat. There is also a fairly equal mix of genders, although it is uncertain how willing the males are to take part in this often expensive hobby. Couples and families represent a substantial proportion of shoppers, though teenagers appear to have more money to spend, and providing for their particular tastes has become an important goal for many high street stores.
- 1 It is a well-known fact that teenagers avidly follow fashion and trends. They want to have the latest model in mobile phones and i-pods and are quick to discard their old models. They are also very conscious of their image and try to show their personality through their clothes. Frequently updating their wardrobe is essential for many teenagers, as is wearing the 'right' clothes, such as designer trainers, which may help them to feel that they are more accepted by their particular set of friends. They also require a range of more reasonably priced but trendy clothes to go clubbing.
- 2 According to research, the majority of girls have a clear idea of the things they want to buy. They intend to get value for money, so are willing to look around before making a decision. Boys, however, are less keen. They prefer to go to their favourite shops and buy the first suitable item that they see. Spending-time with their friends in coffee bars or fast food restaurants is generally considered to be more fun by boys, and they see little point in spending hours just to choose a pair of jeans.
- 3 This view of shopping appears to continue as boys grow up, and find a partner. They perhaps feel obliged to go shopping with their girlfriend or wife, but rarely look like they are enjoying themselves. Men are often seen waiting patiently outside changing rooms, holding countless plastic bags containing their partner's purchases in both hands! For a lot of men, the highlight of the day is a break for lunch, or coffee at a pavement café, preferably with a newspaper to catch up on the latest sports news.
- 4 Shopping certainly requires a lot of time and energy, yet women especially seem to find buying new items a rewarding occupation. However, the pleasure of spending money often does not have a long-lasting effect and maybe that is why a trip to the shops has become a weekly or monthly obsession for some. This challenges the competitive high street stores to find new ways to attract the most enthusiastic shoppers.

For questions 5 - 10, decide which is the correct answer A, B, C, or D.

5. Shopping is ,
A. usually considered more likely to be a woman's pastime.
B. clearly enjoyed by European males.
C. more affordable for young people.
D. considered more enjoyable at the weekend.
6. A word closest in meaning to avidly [paragraph 2] is
A. enthusiastically. B. precisely. C. indifferently. D. dynamically.
7. According to the text, teenagers
A. tend to choose mainly designer clothes. B. like to collect mobile phones and i-pods.
C. think fashion identifies their social group. D. do not want to wear the same clothes twice.
8. Teenage girls
A. tend to spend more money when shopping than boys.
B. are prepared to take their time when buying things.
C. think that sitting in cafés is a waste of time.
D. generally do not know exactly what they want.
9. The word closest in meaning to countless [paragraph 4] is
A. numerous. B. few. C. frequent. D. considerable.
10. The pleasure of going shopping
A. is remembered for a long time after the trip. B. depends on the attractiveness of the shops.
C. is clearly understood by most men. D. is in the satisfaction of buying new things.
