Our reactions to crime are very personal, depending on our social situation and our upbringing, according to a recent report from Swedish psychologists. Most people consider non-violent crimes, such as <sup>1</sup> possession of a <sup>2</sup> _____ substance, to be minor compared with crimes which involve injury to people, such as violent <sup>3</sup> _____. Views on punishment are also changing, with the majority now seeing <sup>4</sup> _____ service as the most beneficial punishment for both the offender and the victims. Increasingly, it is felt that punishments like being held in <sup>5</sup> _____ confinement or being sentenced to <sup>6</sup> _____ imprisonment are less appropriate, with <sup>7</sup> _____ help being seen as necessary to rehabilitate criminals. It was also felt that those <sup>8</sup> _____ of certain crimes should have it removed from their record when the <sup>9</sup> _____ has been <sup>10</sup> _____, or at least soon after.

b Underline the correct words to complete the conversation.

- A People commit all types of crime today. How do you think we should deal with these offenders?
- B Well, it depends on the crime and the person who has been found <sup>1</sup> wrong / guilty of the crime.
- A What about someone who has been <sup>2</sup> punished / sentenced to life imprisonment? Should they <sup>3</sup> deliver / serve the full sentence?
- B In my opinion, a <sup>4</sup> cut / reduced sentence for good behaviour should be a possibility. Such offenders need to receive one-to-one <sup>5</sup> counselling / punishment.
- A Do you think offenders need to be brought face-to-face with their <sup>6</sup> crimes / victims?
- B Yes, I'd agree that in certain situations a meeting could help both the victim and the offender.
