HOLLYWOOD, its life and times

Hollywood is a well-known name in the world: but where is it exactly? How did it begin?

At the start of the 20th century, a new city was beginning to grow on some flat land near the sea in southern California; its name was Los Angeles - the name of the old Spanish mission that had been there for many years. At the same time, a new industry was just being born; the cinema. In America, they talked of "motion pictures", but this soon became shortened to "movies".

America's movie industry began life in New York; but by 1910, movie-makers were moving to Los Angeles. In New York, everything was too expensive; workers, land, taxes. Worse than that, it was difficult to make movies in winter, because it was too cold. By contrast, the Los Angeles region was full of advantages. In California, they could make films all through the year; and everything was cheaper. In particular, there was lots of land for sale.

The movie-makers found what they needed a few miles outside Los Angeles. As a result, they began building large new studios in an area called Hollywood, near some small dry hills. Movies quickly became very popular. However, movies were expensive to make, and film companies needed money - lots of it. For this reason, Hollywood rapidly became dominated by a small number of big companies such as MGM, Fox, Warner Bros. and Paramount.

Naturally, Hollywood has changed a lot in 80 years! Today the biggest studios belong to huge international firms, like Fox. They are the only companies that can afford to make today's very expensive films; and for Titanic - which was at the time the most expensive film ever - Fox had to get help from another big company, Paramount.

Since then, the big companies have had their ups and downs, but most of them are still there. Before, Hollywood only made films for America; today it has to make them for the world. The suburb of Los Angeles has become the center of a global dream-machine. We now live in the age of global culture. Hollywood did not invent this culture but it has become one of the most powerful elements in it - we all now live on planet Hollywood.
