A tech-free holiday – can I do it?

A report by Marcus Jones

It's the start of our one-week school holiday in May. I'm getting ready for a holiday without technology! That means no mobile phones, no video games and no YouTube. I'm doing it as part of a school project. For the project, we're looking at lives of teenagers fifty years ago. So our homework is to spend the school holiday without technology and write a daily diary about it. We spend fifteen minutes writing about our opinions and feelings in our school diary every day and then we upload our diary entries to the school blog. That's the only time we can use technology!

It's only 4 p.m. on Saturday and I'm already missing my phone. It feels strange. My sister is sitting next to me on the sofa. She's texting her friends and laughing at me! My family think I can't live without technology. I want to show them they're wrong! How is everyone else doing?

I'm finding it easy at the moment. I play football every Saturday and so I don't usually play on my computer anyway.

Alexandra, 16Add message | Report

I'm feeling a bit bored! I miss chatting to my friends online. I can't believe it's only day 1!

Sienna, 15Add message | Report

It's easy for me because I'm staying with family in Wales for the holiday. We come every May on holiday. The house doesn't have wi-fi and my mobile has no signal here. I'm writing this in a café in the town. Our holidays here are always technology-free!
