Conversation

- Hi, Jeff! Hey, you remember Tracy from accounting, don't you?
- Sure, she's blonde, from London, isn't she?
- That's right! Well, you'll never believe this, but last week she won the lottery!
- She did? Wow, that's something! I remember that she always talked about going to Italy, didn't she?
- Sure, she talked to you about it, too, didn't she? I bet she's on her way there right now!
- Some people are just lucky, I guess. Hey, Clark, you're buying a lottery ticket this week, aren't you?
- You better believe it, Jeff!

QUESTION TAGS:

Complete the sentences from the article. Then choose the correct option

1. You remember Tracy from accounting, _____?
2. Sure, she's blonde, from London, _____?
3. She talked to you about it, too, _____?
4. You're buying a lottery ticket this week, _____?
5. Let's have some drink, shall we?

RULE: We use the question tag to ask for help / confirmation

- For questions tags we use the auxiliary verb / the main verb
- A subject pronoun / verb follows the auxiliary verb
- For affirmative sentences, we make a(n) affirmative / negative question and for negative sentences we make a(n) affirmative / negative question

LIVEWORKSHEETS

Match the following sentences with question tags.

Peter is older than eighty-five,	won't you?
Samantha and Danny are in the library,	isn't he
Rick hasn't brought the books back,	aren't I?
Arnold didn't know about the exam,	aren't they?
You will open the door,	has he?
I'm late,	did he?

Write question tags in the following sentences

0. Amy is very good at chess, isn't she ?
1. They were active tennis players in high school, _____?
2. Give me a pen, _____?
3. Rupert and Jenny never come to house parties _____?
4. Your niece never eats chocolate, _____?
5. Margaret hasn't finished cooking yet, _____?
6. Students don't like math generally, _____?
7. Keep your promise Andy, _____?
8. The police found some fingerprints on the wall, _____?
9. People will travel to Mars on day in the future, _____?
10. Let's buy mom a new TV for Christmas, _____?

LIVEWORKSHEETS