On my first day at university, something terrible happened. I was on an Information Technology course and my first class started at nine o'clock. I woke up very late and I had no time for breakfast, so I bought an orange juice from the university cafeteria. I ran into the room and everyone was at a computer. They all looked at me and I went to sit behind a computer, but I still had my orange juice. The teacher said, 'You can't drink that in here.' But as I walked across the room I tripped, and the orange juice went all over a classmate and her computer. Luckily, the computer was OK, and the classmate, Clara, saw the funny side of it. In fact, we're good friends now. Still, it wasn't a good start.
