The Loch Ness Challenge

Have you ever heard of Scotland's Loch Ness Monster? Well, this year I took part ⁰ a different kind of Loch Ness Monster: it was a 'monster' charity cycle race – 106 kilometres long!

The event is held every year and ¹ cycle around the lake on traffic-free roads. The idea of the race is to ² money for the cancer support charity Macmillan. I decided to do the race in ³ of my grandfather, who died from cancer two years ago. I asked all my friends and family to ⁴ me for as much money as they could. In the end, we were able to ⁵ over £400 to Macmillan. The best way to organise and collect the money is to ⁶ up a webpage through a specially-designed website. There are loads of them on the Internet.

A word or warning: I would have done more training if I ⁷ known how steep some of the hills were! My ankles and feet were ⁸ by the end of the day (they soon went back to their normal size, you'll be pleased to know!).

Would I do it again? Of course! In fact, I've already entered next year's race. Maybe I'll see you there!

Hi Anna,

I have an amazing story to tell you! I'm actually ⁰ hospital at the moment. It's OK, don't ¹ . I'm OK now, but let me tell you what happened.

With that, though, I usually only get a ³ nose (I use so many tissues!) rather than breathing problems. My mum said I had all the symptoms ⁴ asthma, but I'd never had that before. Eventually, Mum decided to take me to the hospital. The doctor did a blood ⁵ but there didn't seem to be anything wrong. It hurt ⁶ she took the blood, but it wasn't as bad as having an ⁷ . You know I hate having a needle stuck in my arm! But guess who's just arrived at the hospital and is sitting here with me now! Jenny! She's broken her leg, so she's a patient ⁸ the hospital too. They put her in the bed next to mine. I wish you ⁹ here with us too. But don't have an accident! By the way, my asthma's OK and I should be out soon.

See you soon!

Maria
