Thousands of people in Calcutta, India, have no jobs and no proper homes. They live in homes made out of mats, boxes and rusty sheets of tin. Many have to camp permanently in the railway stations, cooking, eating, sleeping and feeding their babies there. Babies are born in the streets and people die there too. As many as seventeen out of every hundred families live in the streets, having nowhere to go. Many of these people are sick because of a hot and damp climate. Although the government tries hard to provide houses, schools and medical services, it can hardly keep up with the increasing population.
