WHEN I GROW UP MAG

April 24, 2009

By Sara Dickinson BRONZE, Wyckoff, New Jersey

In kindergarten, my class was asked, “What do you want to be when you grow up?” We illustrated our dream occupations with crayons on the paper. Our drawings were ballerinas, firefighters, and astronauts– careers that were seen as typical dreams of five-year-olds.

My picture showed a stick figure with brown hair behind a large rectangle that was supposed to be a counter. Underneath was my barely legible handwriting: “When I grow up, I want to work at the Market Basket.” It was the local grocery store.

When we are young, there are many questions about what we want to be when we grow up. But adults don’t expect a child to give an answer for sure. On the other hand, teens are expected to know exactly what they want to be and how to achieve that goal.

When I think about the future, I definitely don’t see myself working at the Market Basket, but in reality, if that would make me happy, I would do it. So, the next time someone asks me what I want to be when I grow up, I will simply say “happy.”

Happiness is a destination for everyone. We may want to walk different paths in life, but we all want to be happy wherever we end up. Choose your path, but don’t worry too much about choosing wisely. Make a mistake or two and try new things. But always remember, if you’re not happy, you’re not at the end of your journey
