Hernán Crespo is back. He was born in Vicente Lopez, Buenos Aires and he started playing for River Plate. He played professionally for the first time at the age of 16. He was one of the best and most effective players of the Argentine Team, coming after Messi, Batistuta and Agüero. He stopped playing football at 36. "I know I can't play anymore. It's becoming more difficult and harder to train and to score goals. All the other players are younger and more effective, so it's time to stop." These were his words for the official website of his club at the moment, the Parma in Italy. He has lived in magnificent cities in Italy and in the UK as well with his family. He married a Romanian lady, Andra, in 2005 and has had three girls. However, in December 2018 he moved back to his country to work as the Banfield coach. Everybody was surprised at his decision, but his words were the following: "I need the adrenalin of training and working. And I need challenges, I don't like it when life is too easy." The fans at his new club are happy and hope to have one of the best coaches in the history of the club.
