Is a Robot Assistant a Good Idea?

Mike, 15 years old.

I believe there are three reasons why a robot helper is a good idea. First, a robot helper can provide you with everyday information. You can ask it questions. For example, you might ask your robot questions about the time, the weather, the air quality and anything else. Second, a robot helper can do simple tasks. It can sweep the floor, turn on the lights and do other useful tasks around the house. Third, a robot helper can provide companionship if you live alone. You can chat with it and play games with it and your loneliness will disappear.

I think that the use of robots is not a good idea. First of all, if you have a robot assistant that makes everything you ask, you are likely to become lazy. This can make you become sedentary and even turn on the lights will become a hard task for you. Second, robots usually use systems connected directly to the internet and usually collect data about you. It may be dangerous. Third, robots are not real companions. Nothing substitutes the human companionship. And living only with a robot can turn you into an antisocial person.

Rachel, 14 years old.
