BONDING

Whenever we have spare time, we (0) needed try to get together with family members. We can (1) built family bonds by taking part in community events. Walkathons, marathons or clean-up campaigns are (2) any community events families can participate in. There is no picture (3) most captivating than families out on activities together. It (4) was a good way to keep the events enjoyable. It doesn't matter whether we win a prize or not as it is quality family time. Recently I participated in the Let's Work Together community walk and had a most enjoyable time. This is a (5) best walk as it caters to all ages and is only 4 km long. A (6) fewer families were there and as one man put it – walk to bond. Walking together as a family (7) go beyond physical health. It is a (8) beauty sight where no one holds a handphone or listen to music on an MPV. This is the time leisure time well-spent - family members talk to each other more than they do at home

Anti-litter 30-beach challenge

Bin bags on the ready, 'long distance activist' Mohammed O. Houji. moves methodically along a beach in Tunisia's Mediterranean town of Nabeul, scooping up all kinds of trash as he goes along. The 27-year-old sanitary engineer set out in July to walk a 300km stretch of coastline in northern Tunisia and clean up 30 beaches along the way. He hopes that the two-month trek will convince authorities, holiday makers and the average Tunisians alike that the sea should not be used as a giant garbage bin.

With a sturdy pair of boots and a hat to shield him from the summer sun, Houji began his journey in the coastal city of Mahdia and plans to finish in Solimane, 40km from the capital city, Tunis. The trip will take him through crowded hotspots and also along secluded coves and shores. The activist said, "I believe in citizen mobilization and chose to act .. and to raise awareness about the problem of pollution on our beaches." The Facebook page of his 300 Kilometres campaign has more than 13,000 followers and is entirely independent.

But, while Houji may be a dreamer, he is also realistic. His 300km action is really not about cleaning. He feels he is just a drop of water in the ocean. He wants to raise awareness and get people thinking.
