I have a very good relationship with all of my relatives, and we spend a lot of time together. During my summer vacation last year, we all gathered at my parent's house for a meal. I was playing with my younger cousin who is about 10 years old and he is heaps of fun to be around.

When I spend time with him, I feel like I learn to see life through the eyes of a child. He can say the funniest things and can be entertained for hours by the simplest of games. His younger brother, who was 5 years younger than him, was trying to play with us.

My 10 year old cousin looked at me very seriously and told me he was concerned that the baby brother would never grow up. I asked him why he was worried, and he said because when he is 30, he would have to take care of him. I was completely dumbfounded by this comment and found it so sweet that he was concerned about the wellbeing of his younger sibling. He is so ignorant to the world and I find it so sweet that the simplest things can bother him so much.
