Long ago there was a Mexican boy named Juan who helped raise money for his family by growing chili peppers in his garden.

But one day when he came out to his chili patch, he found a ram there eating some peppers and stomping on others. "Go away, Mr. Ram," said Juan. "Those are my peppers," The ram replied, "Get away from me or I'll butt you into the next county." Juan started to cry, and all the animals on the little farm felt sorry for him. The cat tried to help. She went up to the ram and said,

"You should be ashamed of yourself. Get out of there.
Those are Juan's chili peppers." But the ram lowered his head and said, "Get out of here or I'll butt you into the next county." So the cat ran away. The dog tried to help. He came out and barked at the ram, but the ram lowered his head and said, "Get out of here or I'll butt you into the next county." The dog too ran away.

Finally a little ant said, "I can help you, Juan." The ant climbed onto the ram and began biting him all over. The ram jumped up and started running. He ran so fast and so far that now he is in the next county!

There once was a poor woodcutter, named Ali Baba. He lived in the small wooden house near the forest.

One day he was gathering wood in the forest when a band of thieves approached. He hid and watched them enter a cave that opened when they said the words, "Alakazam, open!" After they departed, Ali Baba stood before the cave and gave the command "Alakazam, open!" He was surprised, the cave opened to reveal an enormous supply of gold and treasures. Ali Baba packed some of the gold on his donkeys and returned home.

His brother Qasim was rich but hardhearted merchant, discovered Ali Baba's new wealth, he demanded an explanation. The next day Qasim visited the cave and greedily gathered as much treasure as he could, but forgot the formula for leaving the cave. The thieves opened the cave and found Qasim over there. The leader of the thieves killed him.

Qasim's wife was worried why her husband did not come home for a day. She asked Ali Baba to look for him. Ali Baba went to the cave and was surprised that his brother killed. He brought his brother's body home and one knew it and reported that to the leader of the thieves.

The following day the leader of the thieves planned to kill Ali Baba and he came to his house. He tried to kill him, fortunately his slave, Mrganah, helped him. She swung a sword and killed the leader of the thieves. Mrganah freed Ali Baba from the murder.

Finally Ali Baba married Mrganah and they lived happily ever after.
