No More Flour Bags

Canada's new favourite hobby is making a national problem. Lately, it's very difficult to find flour. That is because everybody is suddenly baking. Flour companies from all over Canada are working hard to meet our new needs, but it is difficult. For Robin Hood Flour, their problem has been packaging.

Thanks to new social distancing rules, we've all been staying at home and baking. Our new interest is making it difficult to find baking products across the country—from flour, to eggs, to chocolate chips. Even one of Canada's biggest flour companies, Robin Hood, is running out of their famous yellow bags.

Robin Hood explained that they are temporarily putting some of their flour in white and brown bags." The company explained that the flour inside is not different. The traditional bright packaging will be back as soon as possible.

Many customers say that buying baking supplies in Canada is almost impossible. "I couldn't buy Robin Hood flour for almost a month," said one person. "If I can get the flour, I don't care what kind of bag it's in," said a woman.

Robin Hood said they will get the product back on the shelves soon. "We've temporarily dressed down, but what's inside has stayed the same,"

Instructions: Answer the following questions in complete sentences.

1. What is Canada's favourite thing to do?

2. Why are Canadians baking so much?

3. What are three things that bakers can't find easily?

4. Who is running out of yellow bags??

5. What is Robin Hood putting its flour in now?

6. Is the flour different now?

7. Will they ever put flour in yellow bags again?

LIVEWORKSHEETS