READING

Read the passage and choose the correct answer (A, B, C or D) for each question.

I went to Tay Ho, a village famous for its conical hat making techniques in Hue last week. The craft was first introduced to Hue hundreds of years ago, with numerous craft villages - namely Da Le, Phu Cam, Doc So, Trieu Tay, Kim Long, or Sia ect. Among them, Tay Ho is the most prominent name since it is the birthplace of the conical hat in Hue. Located on the bank of the Nhu Y River, in Phu Ho commune, Phu Vang District, the village is about 12 km away from Hue City.

It takes artisans a lot of time and effort to make a seemingly simple conical hat. Normally, they have to follow 15 stages, from going to the forest to collect leaves to ironing the leaves, making frames, etc. Almost all of these processes require the diligence and adroitness of craftsmen's hands. Firstly, craftsmen collect young leaves of the Bo Quy Diep tree from the forest. The leaves are then exposed to mist, dried and ironed. The next step, which determines the shape and size of a conical hat, is making a cone frame, with 16 small bamboo splints bent into an arc shape. After that, leaves will be arranged and attached to the frame. As a Hue's conical hat always has two layers of leaves, craftsmen must be very skillful to make them very thin. After this stage, the hats will be covered with oil and dried under the sun. To make the conical hats more special, paintings of Hue and poems are added between the two layers of leaves, creating bai tho or poetic conical hats.

These days, although the conical hat has not been thriving as ever, there are still many talented artisans in Tay Ho living on the traditional craft. Commercially, the conical hat village in Hue provides the market with millions of hats yearly, which meets not only the needs of locals but those of tourists as well. The conical hat will likely remain a unique souvenir in Hue's tours for years to come.
