

Descriptive Writing

Describing situations, things or people will help you gain a sense of organization and sequence because it is not enough to give sporadic details. It is absolutely necessary to include an order, whether it is of importance or events. To do so, think about what you want people to notice first, then brainstorm on a space of yours to start giving it a sense. After doing this, you are ready to start writing the first draft.

1. Write about your happy place.
  - a. First, think about the characteristics you want to highlight in your writing. Write them down.
  - b. Organize your ideas by brainstorming details that point out the characteristics previously written down.
  - c. Start with your first draft!
