Teen Surfer Never Quits

Back in 2003, Halloween started out just like any other day for award-winning surfer Bethany Hamilton. The 13-year-old and her buddies headed to one of their favorite surfing spots off the coast of the Hawaiian island of Kauai. But this wasn't going to be a typical day at the beach for Bethany. While Bethany waited for a wave, a 4.6-meter (15-foot)-long tiger shark swam up and bit her. It tore off her left arm just below the shoulder. Bethany was rushed to the hospital, where doctors patched up what remained of her injured limb. Despite the loss of her arm, Bethany was back surfing less than a month after the shark attack.

Now Bethany takes precautions. She no longer surfs early in the morning or at dusk, prime feeding times for sharks. And she now surfs on a board patterned with black-and-white stripes. She thinks the stripes look cool but sharks don't, since the same stripes are found on some poisonous sea creatures. "The sharks are scared of those stripes," Bethany says.
