2 It's important to read the questions carefully before you do a listening task, so that you already have a good idea of what the recording will be about before it begins. Look at task 3 below. Although you don't know which answers will be correct, you can work out quite a lot of information just from the questions. Read questions 1-6 and then write down five facts that you already know about what Richard is going to say. The first one is done for you.

- 1 Richard has decided to create a wildlife area.
- 2 _____
- 3 _____
- 4 _____
- 5 _____

Always read through the questions carefully to get an idea of what the recording will be about, and think about what information the questions have already given you. The answer options will also tell you a lot about the sort of things the speaker is going to talk about. If you have these ideas in mind, it will help you to work out whether the options are right or wrong when you hear the conversation.
