Underwater Hockey

Underwater hockey, or Octopush, is a fast-paced 1) sport played at the bottom of a swimming pool. It was invented by divers in England and it is 2) becoming a sport that is drawing a lot of attention. Players wear a diving mask, fins, 3) gloves and a snorkel. Playing underwater hockey is quite challenging. The object of the game is to use a small stick to push the puck into a tray which acts as the opponents' goal. Knowing when to dive and when to return to the surface for air is part of the game's strategy. Although there are ten 4) in each team, only six are allowed in the water. As a result, player substitutions can happen at any time, increasing the speed and 5) of the game. Underwater hockey is growing in 6) and is a very exciting team water sport.
