Everybody can learn

It is how we learn that makes the difference. What do you know about your learning style? by Alicia Ines Gechi

Each learner is unique and has more than one learning style. But we generally have one style that is the strongest.

Knowing how we learn helps us to improve each day.

A- Some people learn by doing. They learn best when their body is involved in the learning process. If you move your hands around a lot and are constantly moving, you are a / an _____.

E- Some learners prefer using reason and logic to understand cause and effect. They can also recognise patterns easily. If you enjoy classifying and grouping information together, and organising agendas and itineraries, you are a / an _____.

B- Some people prefer speaking and writing. They like learning through tongue twisters and rhymes. If you enjoy writing, speech and drama classes, you are a / an _____.

f

F- Some learners learn best through interactions with other people. They are usually good at identifying the source of communication problems. If you are good at reading other people's emotions, facial expressions and group dynamics, you are a / an _____.

c

C- Some learners think in pictures and patterns rather than words, and are good at understanding maps and graphs. If you like taking notes in different colours and creating diagrams and pictures, you are a / an _____.

g

G- Some learners prefer to work alone and be independent. They are often good at reflecting and keeping a learning journal. If you choose to use self-study techniques and can find connections between what you already know and new material, you are a / an _____.

D- Some learners think in sounds and learn by listening. They think chronologically and perform well in oral exams. If you identify notes, rhythms and tones, and remember complete conversations, you are a / an _____.
