II/ LISTEN AND FILL IN THE BLANKS (đánh đáp án vào ô trống)

Everyone has a number of _____, but no one has many friends, for true friendship is not common, and there are many people who seem to be _____ of it. For a friendship to be close and lasting, both the friends must have some very special _____.

The first quality is _____. A person who is concerned only with his own interests and feelings cannot be a true friend. Friendship is a two-sided affair; it lives by _____, and no friendship can last long which is all give on one side and all take on the other.

_____ is the second quality. Some people do not seem to be constant. They take up an interest with _____, but they are soon tired of it and feel the attraction of some new object. Such changeable and uncertain people are incapable of a _____ friendship.

Loyalty is the third quality. Two friends must be _____ to each other, and they must know each other so well that there can be no _____ between them. We do not think much of people who readily believe rumours and _____ about their friends. Those who are easily influenced by rumours can never be good friends.

Trust is perhaps the fourth quality. There must be _____ trust between friends, so that each can feel safe when telling the other his or her secrets. There are people who cannot keep a _____, either of their own or of others'. Such people will never keep a friend long.

Lastly, there must be a perfect sympathy between friends - _____ with each other's aims, likes, joys, sorrows, pursuits and pleasures. Where such mutual sympathy does not exist, friendship is _____.
