

I. Read the next blog entry. Think about the time when you lost your cellphone or any other device.

First-world problems

Posted by Jhon on August 26, 2021

As we gathered around to let Anna and her boyfriend near the movie theatre, my daughter placed her iPhone on the bumper of our car, then forgot about it.

An hour later, Anna called us on her boyfriend's phone in tears, hoping that we might have seen her phone. She'd remembered that it was on the bumper. My wife and I both remembered seeing it there, but neither of us gave it another thought.

We retraced our steps back. I walked the last four miles to our house. Cathy, my wife, drove back, hopeful that she might find it along the side of the road. No luck, the phone was gone.

I logged into "find-my-iPhone" but it couldn't be located. My guess was that it was destroyed by a car running over it, or someone found it and turned it off. As a last hope, I placed the phone in lost mode.

I couldn't even be mad at our daughter. She knew she'd made a mistake. She was in tears and even brought me all of the money she'd made from selling her handmade soaps this summer. I told her to hold on to her money and give it some time.

Then my phone rang. It was a call from her phone! We were glad someone found the iPhone.

II. Answer the questions below

1. What will the family probably do next?
  - a) answer the phone
  - b) get a snack
  - c) take their dog for a walk
  - d) drive to the movie theatre again
2. What is likely to happen if they answer the call?
  - a) Anna will be mad
  - b) The person who called will try to return the phone
  - c) The father will yell to the person at the phone
  - d) Anna's boyfriend will split up with her
3. If Anna learnt the lesson, next time she will probably...
  - a) not care about where she lets her phone
  - b) buy a new iPhone
  - c) save more money in case of losing her phone
  - d) place his phone on safer place