The fair was in town and Raj's father had promised to take Raj, Sam and Lee to the fair. The children were excited about the games they can ride at the fair. Lee's mother did not permit Lee to go to the fair as she did not have the money for him.

Lee told his friends he was unable to go with them as he had no money. Raj and Sam promised to help him. They talked about the jobs they could do to get money.

The children washed Sam's father's car but ended up not getting paid. Sam's father was angry as they had messed up the washing. They took Mrs Green's dog for a walk and got paid a pound. Lee had to pay a small girl a pound as the dog had caused her ball to become flat.

Lee still had no money for the fair. He found a purse loaded with money. He returned it to the owner who rewarded his honesty with five pounds.

Lee finally had money to go to the fair. His two friends were happy for him.
