Section B: Read the Top 5 most unusual jobs and create your own unusual job description.
(40 words minimum)

It's time now for today's top five and this morning we've got a great one for you – the top five most unusual jobs; jobs you probably never knew existed.

At number five we have pet food tester. That's right – tasting cat and dog food. Yuck. This job involves trying out new pet food products before the animals. Testers don't eat the food completely. They just put a bit in their mouth and then spit it out and they always have a glass of water next to them.

At number four is fruit cleaner. This job involves making oranges and lemons those bright colours that people want to see in the supermarket. They do this before the fruit goes to the shops by using chemicals and hot steam.

Number three. If you're cat or dog is missing then you might want to talk to someone who spends their time looking for missing animals. And that's exactly what pet detectives do. There's even a film about one – it's called 'Ace Ventura – Pet Detective'.

At number two is the ostrich babysitter. This job is pretty easy. You just have to sit among all the birds on an ostrich farm and make sure they don't start fighting or trying to eat each other's eggs. It's usually very quiet so don't forget to take a book with you.

And the number one unusual job is a golf ball diver. Each year golfers hit millions of golf balls into lakes – by mistake, of course. The golf ball diver then dives down and collects them all to resell in the golf shops.
