Three bicycles disappeared from the local school door last week. Fortunately, the police this morning when a neighbor, Mr. John Parker, phoned 911 to report that he had seen a young man who was trying to open the padlocked chain on a bicycle outside one of the biggest supermarkets in town.

The officers have already but he has refused to cooperate. He hasn't answered any questions, not even his name or address. Now a couple of detectives are working on the case.

First, they must urgently. Of course, the young criminal will be released if the police don't get evidence, but if they do, he may or serve a sentence for robbery.

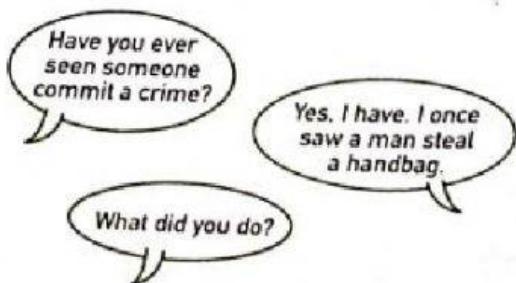

When an officer asked Mr. Parker why he had the young man, he explained that the man had been looking at a bicycle for a long time and then had looked at both sides of the road trying to make sure nobody was looking at him. Of course, the young man did not notice that Mr. Parker was standing at his bedroom window, watching everything he did!
