Match the nation with its description

1.The Australians 	a) The world portrays them as dressing in inconceivably formal clothes, eating tasteless food, doing boring and leisurely sports, and having a specific sense of humor incomprehensible to foreigners. They are conservative, reserved and cold people. Weather has been the main theme for centuries for "small talks" and for their family conversations. They are very polite: they stand patiently waiting for their turn, keeping the door open for the one who is walking behind. They traditionally apologize a lot. They respect personal space in queues, transport, cinemas very much. In general their character is stoic, stubborn, irreconcilable in the struggle for justice.
2.The Americans 	b) Love for their own country is one of the very characteristic traits of this nation. The absolute majority are crazy about the country where they were lucky to be born. They are absolutely open to everything new, they happily try all the cuisines of the world, travel to other countries, adopt some traditions, but invariably return to everything ... The typical … never bothers about what other people think about his clothes, behavior and hobbies, but he also will not allow himself and tell other people how to live. They are one of the most pronounced individualists on the planet, very liberal towards newcomers. They value their comfort very much. Life in one place seems boring to them, so they often travel around their country.
3.The British 	c) They are not only friendly but also true, they are gullible; it is easy to deceive them. They are cheerful, or at least smiling, especially at work. They are talkative. They are great rationalists. The main features of the national natural character of them can be called independence, vigor, enterprise, patriotism, optimism and benevolence.
