A day in the life of a History student

Hi! I'm Rebecca and I'm in my first year of studying History here at the University of York. I've had a great start to uni and I've 0 been able to get involved in so much more 1 _____ just my course, which has really helped me to adjust to life here!

Morning

Usually, if I have a seminar, my day starts at half past seven. This gives me 2 _____ time to get ready, have breakfast and 3 _____ across campus for a 9am start. I live on Campus East, about ten minutes from the main campus. I usually walk or cycle over to my lectures and seminars, 4 _____ on cold and rainy mornings it's nice to be able to take the bus!

Seminars

Seminars make up a large part of teaching in the Department of History. They are a great 5 _____ to discuss and ask questions about your reading or lectures. Usually, the seminar leader is either a lecturer or a postgraduate student. I really enjoy seminars 6 _____ they give you an opportunity to ask about the lecture or something you've read. Also, they help develop your understanding of the subject by 7 _____ to other students about what they have found. Talking in a group can be a bit 8 _____ at first. But the good news is 9 _____ feels the same way and you're not expected to get it right first time.

Afternoon

Then I'll return to my accommodation for a bit of lunch 10 _____ starting any work or reading I have. Luckily, we don't get a ton of essays on top of our reading. I usually work best in my room, but some people prefer 11 _____ in the library or in the social areas located around campus. It all depends 12 _____ how you work or what you're doing.

Evening

By around half past five, most people in the house 13 _____ finished their contact hours and we end up hanging out in the kitchen while we make dinner. It's great to take some time out from studying and relax. University life is a lot 14 _____ when you have people who understand and can make you laugh at the end of a long day! [...]
