Working Hours for Children in the UK

Children are allowed to work in the UK from the age of 13 onwards. Between (0) an ages of 13 and 14, children can only work after 7 a.m. and before 7 p.m. In addition to this, they can only work for a maximum of two hours (9) at a school day. On Saturdays, children can work for up to five hours (10) after 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. On Sundays, children (11) were able to work for up to two hours between 7 a.m. and 11 a.m. Teenagers between the ages of 15 and 16 are allowed to work for up to eight hours (12) in Saturdays and up to a maximum of 35 hours during school holidays. Once teenagers have (13) reach the age of 16, they are called young workers. Therefore, they can work for up to 40 hours a week or up to eight (14) hour a day. It can be difficult (15) of teenagers to balance their schoolwork and co-curricular activities as well as their jobs. It is important for teenagers to both get enough sleep and (16) has enough time to focus on their schoolwork. It should be noted that a combination of excellent school results and working skills will help a child in future.

A QUICK GUIDE TO SAVING MONEY

As a teenager, it is important to know how to save your money. You must keep a record of your spending. Use a notebook or some other means. This can be boring, but it is the best way to make sure you don't spend too much money. You'll be able to see exactly how much money you have left at the end of each month. You can also monitor how you spend your money. Try not to spend too much at the beginning of the month so that you will have enough money until the end of the month.

Be smart with your food shopping. Food will be one of your biggest costs. Buying supermarket value products rather than well-known brands and shopping at the end of the day when many items are discounted are some of the simplest ways to save money. Cook your own meals instead of always eating out.

Don't overpay for transport. Buses remain one of the cheapest ways to travel around town. Check whether there are any student discounts or monthly passes available. In certain cities, there are free buses for tourists that you can use to get around.

Don't forget to take advantage of student discounts. Many shops and food outlets offer student discounts. Even when they aren't advertised, it's worth asking as they are sometimes still available.
