Anna Kriss writes about her favourite restaurant

Do you have a favourite restaurant that you go to with your family? I do! It's called Ben's Place, a new restaurant in my town. Not many people know about it yet, so it's never really busy – which is why we enjoy eating there. It costs more than some restaurants, but the food's good. I'm hoping to go there for my next birthday!

Ben's Place is easy to find, but it's not in the town square, with all the other restaurants and fast food cafés. Instead, it's on a road going out of town, which always has lots of cars driving along it. But you can usually find somewhere to park outside.

When you go into the restaurant, a waiter always comes to say hello, and another one chats to you as you walk to your table. The restaurant looks great inside, with lovely yellow walls. And there's often someone playing the piano, which is nice.

There are wonderful dishes on the menu. Lots of them are things we eat at home. But when I'm at the restaurant, I never know which to have – they all sound good! Dad tries to give me advice, but I prefer to choose for myself.

Everything's delicious, especially the soups and the curries. My dad's a good cook, so I'm hoping one day soon he'll teach me to cook what we have at the restaurant. But my dishes will never be as good as the ones at Ben's Place!
