

Comment adverbs

Match the bold comment adverbs with the definitions.

I thought the job was going to be difficult, but in fact, it's very easy.

It took us over five hours to get there, but eventually, we were able to relax.

Ideally, we would go to Australia if we could afford it.

Basically, it's pretty a simple idea.

I thought they'd broken up, but apparently, they're back together again.

... so, you can see it was a really awful weekend. Anyway, let's forget about it and talk about something else.

She's only 14, so obviously, she can't stay at home on her own.

She's been sick for weeks, but gradually, she's beginning to feel better.

In a perfect world.

The truth is; actually (used to emphasize something, especially the opposite of what was previously said).

In the most important ways.

Clearly (used to give information you expect other people to know or agree with).

Little by little.

According to what you have heard or read.

In any case (used to change or finish a conversation).

In the end; after a series of events or difficulties.