This novel is about a young girl who falls through a rabbit hole into a subterranean fantasy world populated by weird creatures. This book was published in 1865.

It is a story about a young girl who loves books. She is a very talented child. At a young age, she can read books meant for adults. Unfortunately, she has grown up with parents who do not give her the attention and love she deserves. They prefer to watch television than read books. They do not understand her, and often treat her badly. This book was published in 1988.

The story is from the mid-19th century. It is about an orphan, born in a workhouse and sold into apprenticeship with an undertaker. Eventually, he escapes from him and travels to London, where he meets a member of a gang of juvenile pickpockets led by the elderly criminal Fagin. This book was published in 1839.

"Please, sir, I want some more."

The master was a fat, healthy man; but he turned very pale. He gazed with stupefied astonishment on the small rebel for some seconds; and then clung for support to the copper. The assistants were paralyzed with wonder, the boys with fear.

"What!" said the master at length, in a faint voice.

"Please, sir," replied [redacted], "I want some more."

By the time she was three [redacted] had taught herself to read by studying newspapers and magazines that lay around the house. At the age of four, she could read fast and well and she naturally began hankering after books. The only book in the whole of this enlightened household was something called Easy Cooking belonging to her mother, and when she had read this from cover to cover and had learnt all the recipes by heart, she decided she wanted something more interesting.

'Daddy,' she said, 'do you think you could buy me a book?'

'A book?' he said. 'What d'you want a flaming book for?'

'To read, Daddy.'

'What's wrong with the telly, for heaven's sake? We've got a lovely telly with a twelve-inch screen and now you come asking for a book! You're getting spoiled, my girl!'

The rabbit-hole went straight on like a tunnel for some way, and then dipped suddenly down, so suddenly that [redacted] had not a moment to think about stopping herself before she found herself falling down what seemed to be a very deep well.
