- Question 9

- Success—the article was successful. It presented both sides of the debate with practical examples. The author not only gave the advantages and disadvantages, but also stated some specific solutions for the disadvantages such as: training, tools and communication.
- Relevance - The article came from the internet and seems to be current and relevant since it uses a technology company as the context for its examples.
- Style – The author used a conversational style to make the reading very easy to follow. This was demonstrated by the use of second person (you / your) to refer to the reader.
- Word Choice – The author used language that was professional but was easy to understand. Even idioms like “a million and one” were used to make the language familiar and easy to understand.
- Structure— the structure of the article made it very easy for the reader to understand its content. The article presented the “pros” and then the “cons” just as the title suggested.
 - Different subheadings were used to separate the pros from the cons as well as identify specific examples for each.
 - The article was balanced in its presentation by first identifying the pro or con and then stating its benefit or how to overcome its disadvantage.
- Presentation — The margins and spacing between the subheadings all made the article easier to read and helped the reader follow the flow of the presentation.
 - The bold type on the subheadings made them stand out to the reader.
 - Perhaps some statistics in paragraph 1 related to the amount of money saved by outsourcing would have been helpful.
