Alix understood that her husband was Charles Lamaitre who had killed three wives! She was to become another of his victims.

But what about her? What could possibly have saved her?

Had he changed his mind at last moment? No, the real answer was the old gardener.

She now understood her husband's uncontrollable anger. Doubtless he had paved the way by telling everyone he met that they were _____ 30 to London the next day. That is why George, the gardener, had decided to come on the irregular day. George had come unexpectedly and had spoken about London to her. He revealed everything to her, and she had contradicted the story! She had broken his game. It was too risky _____ 31 away with her that night. But what a narrow escape! Her life was hanging on a hair. If she hadn't happened to mention that _____ 32 to Gerald - and she really hadn't intended to do that, - she would have already been killed. Killed by her dear, beloved husband.

But there was no time _____ 33. She must survive. She must find a way out. She is strong, and she can do it. But she must get _____ 34 before he returns. If he comes and finds her at home... it will be the end of everything. Of her. Alix threw the papers into the _____ 35 and locked it. She has to run for her life. But suddenly she hears her _____ 36 voice. He has returned! Reflected in the mirror she sees he is smiling to himself looking at a new spade!
