History of Storytelling

Twenty-four new channels, a multitude of websites, hundreds of newspapers, millions of books... There are many ways to read and hear stories in the twenty-first century. Have you ever thought how people shared important stories in the past? Not many people could read or write, so they developed other methods to pass on myths, news, and beliefs.

- 1. Aboriginal Art: Australian Aboriginal storytellers paint pictures of "Dreamtime" - a distant time before memory. The tradition started 4,000 years ago and pictures are painted on rock, canvas, and tree bark. Aboriginal stories are about creation and spiritual beliefs.
- 2. Ancient Cultures: The scribes of ancient Egypt, ancient Greece, and other ancient cultures created their own alphabets and hieroglyphics in order to record events. These intricate alphabets helped to write stories, keep documents, and send messages.
- 3. East Indian Storytellers: In Indian villages, artists painted stories of gods, kings, and heroism. Storytellers walked from place to place, entertaining, teaching, and telling stories. The tradition of using puppet shows, story cloths, and story boxes continues today.
- 4. Native American Stories: The elders of different Native American cultures orally passed down thousands of tales throughout their history. They were word and picture carriers who remembered and related every detail of their subject. Some tales were legends, some were based on true American Indian history, and some were children's stories.

THE CITIES OF GOLD

In the time of the “conquistadores” (Spanish invaders), people in the ancient Americas had come to believe in the existence of a magical city of gold. Around 1540, a Spaniard by the name of Francisco Vásquez de Coronado formed an expedition in search of the mythical treasure. “We have to search for the gold”, he cried out, “we shouldn’t waste another minute.” With 400 men, he marched across the Great Plains finding only poor villages and clay articles. “You mustn’t head south, you must head north,” a wise man told him. And so on he went, believing always in the lost city. The natives continued to talk about tremendous riches to be seen in the marvelous “City of Gold.” “You cannot search there,” the elders told Coronado, as he and his men searched through the sacred grounds. But they found nothing, only bones and rags. After many years of trekking and searching, Coronado had lost half of his men to disease. “That is it,” he said to himself, we should stop, and we must go back to our homes and forget about this gold!”

a. How many men marched with Coronado? _____

b. Why did Coronado head north? _____

c. Where did Coronado search? _____

d. Why did Coronado stop searching? _____

e. Where did the men go in the end? _____
