At a travelling carnival, twelve-year-old Josh Baskin is embarrassed when he is too small for one of the rides. He puts a coin in a fortune-telling machine, which tells him to make a wish – so Josh wishes he was big. When he [1] _____ the next morning, he notices that his wish has come true: he is an adult, although still a child inside. His mother thinks he is a burglar, so he has to leave home. He tries to [2] _____ to the carnival, but it has left town.

On his own, Josh needs money, so he finds a job at a toy company. He doesn't really have the skills he needs for work, but he [3] _____ it because he loves toys. In fact, he does well at work, but he finds it difficult to [4] _____ the other adults there. The only person he really [5] _____ is a female colleague called Susan Lawrence.

One day, Josh's friend Billy tells him that the carnival is back in town. Josh [6] _____ Susan in the middle of an important meeting at work. When she [7] _____ him, he is at the fortune-telling machine. Finally, she realises that he did not [8] _____ the story about being a child. The two say goodbye before Josh puts another coin in the machine and becomes a child again.
