6. Choose the correct answer.

Utrecht, in the Netherlands, is a bike-friendly city, but there are any / much / many traffic lights all over the city. This makes it difficult for people on bikes. The city not want / doesn't want / don't want people to stop cycling. So, now it has got a / an / some electronic kiosks around town with a special technology to reduce waiting time. How do they work / they work / they do work? Special sensors in the kiosks detect a bike's speed. When people ride past, they see a symbol on a screen. The symbol give / gives / don't give them information about the next traffic light. For example, one symbol tells them to ride quickly because there isn't some / many / much time before the next green light. Sensors also send information about the weather to the traffic lights. The lights change quickly when it rains, so bike riders not sit / doesn't sit / don't sit in the rain for a long time.
