The best job in the world

A British man is the first person to be offered the position of caretaker of an Australian tropical island, a six-month position described as 'the best job in the world.' Web users from all over the world viewed the online job description and there were over 34,000 applications for the job. His new job requires Ben Southall, a charity fundraiser from Petersfield, Hampshire, to live and work on Hamilton Island on Queensland's Great Barrier Reef. As well as the $110,000 salary, the post of caretaker comes with a three-bedroom beach home, a swimming pool and golf cart. Mr Southall's responsibilities will include exploring the neighbouring islands, swimming, snorkelling and making friends with the locals. He will also be expected to report back to Tourism Queensland and the world via blogs, a photo diary, video updates and interviews. Possibly Ben's girlfriend who does not have to do anything on the island has the best job in the world!
